Marine Forces Reserve

Lt. Gen. Dennis M. McCarthy,
Commander, MarForRes

*As versatile Continental Marines, MarForRes
will be ever-ready to alleviate the intense personnel and operational tempo of active forces in peacetime and in war.*

Sgt. Maj. Robin W. Dixon,
Sergeant Major, MarForRes

Marine Forces Reserve is the headquarters command for all 100,000 Reserve Marines and 289 Reserve units located at 185 sites throughout the United States.

The Marine Reserve team possesses capabilities across the full spectrum of military operations; from humanitarian assistance and disaster relief support to the most potent combat forces in the world.

On Nov. 1, 1994, the command was designated Marine Forces Reserve and structured to mirror the active component forces. This established its parity with Marine Forces Pacific and Marine Forces Atlantic, the other two senior organizational entities making up the Fleet Marine Force.

Marine Forces Reserve, the largest command in the Corps, has four major subordinate commands: the 4th Marine Division, 4th Marine Aircraft Wing, 4th Force Service Support Group, and Marine Corps Reserve Support Command.

The United States Marine Corps Reserve was established on Aug. 29, 1916 and is responsible for providing trained units and qualified individuals to be mobilized for active duty in time of war, national emergency or contingency operations and provide personnel and operational tempo relief for active component forces in peacetime. Serving with great distinction, in every clime and place, Reserve Marines have regularly operated alongside the active component in both World Wars, Korean Conflict, Vietnam War, Persian Gulf War and numerous other conflicts including Operation Enduring Freedom.

In order to keep its fighting edge, Marine Forces Reserve's units participate in more than 20 large exercises annually in places such as; Norway, South Korea, the Balkans, Central America and Thailand.

The ethos for Marine Forces Reserve is mobilization and combat readiness.

This ensures the men and women of Marine Forces Reserve stand ready, willing and able to answer the nation's call at home and abroad at a moment's notice.

Marine Corps Reserve Support Command

Col. Eugene G. Payne Jr.,
Commander, MCRSC

MCRSC provides administrative support and customer service to reserve Marines and active duty operational sponsors and recruit prior service Marines to fill selected Marine Corps reserve billets.

Sgt. Maj. Shanda L. Elkins,
Sergeant Major, MCRSC

The Marine Corps Reserve Support Command (MCRSC) is the sole administrative provider for three distinct and varied sections of the Marine Corps Reserve: Individual Ready Reservists (IRRs), Individual Mobilization Augmentees (IMAs) and Mobilization Training Unit (MTU) members.

IRRs are those Marines who have finished their initial active obligation and are now members of the inactive reserve who muster annually for administrative purposes. This population averages approximately 60,000 annually.

IMAs are reservists who are pre-assigned to a mobilization billet requiring continuous training during peacetime with an active component unit. They drill and perform annual training the same as Selected Marine Corps Reserve (SMCR) Marines.

MTUs are IRRs who perform reserve training in a non-pay status for retirement credit points only.

2002 marks the 37th anniversary of MCRSC. It was during the opening stages of American involvement in Vietnam that the precursor of MCRSC was established. Through the years, this activity underwent a series of name changes, though its initial mission to provide total administrative support for the Marine Corps Reserve continues.

MCRSC's mission is specifically tailored to provide administrative support and service to its entire customer base. That, along with its vision and guiding principles, allows other administrators throughout Marine Forces Reserve to focus on SMCR Marines. The SMCR are Marines who report for duty one weekend a month and two weeks in the summer.

The support MCRSC provides helps Marine Forces Reserve to mobilize rapidly and efficiently, as was proven in Operations Desert Shield/Storm and is evident today with Operation Enduring Freedom. It was through their support that the Marine Reserves were able to activate more than 31,000 Marines during the Persian Gulf War.

MCRSC is at the cutting edge of personnel administration. They are absolutely committed to improving the quality of customer support for Active and Reserve Marines, providing commanders greater accessibility to their Marines' records, and providing subject matter experts with common information from which to build, shape, and manage Marine Corps Total Force Administration, which combines all facets of Active, Reserve and retired personnel administration into one team.

MCRSC, the only major subordinate command not co-located in New Orleans, La., is located in Kansas City, Mo. The command is composed of approximately 385 Marines and civilian employees.

4th Marine Division

Maj. Gen. (select) John J. McCarthy,
Commanding General, 4th MarDiv

4th MarDiv provides trained combat and combat support personnel and units to augment and reinforce the active component whenever national security requires.

Sgt. Maj. Anthony A. Cruz,
Sergeant Major, 4th MarDiv

Fourth Marine Division is the largest ground combat element in the Marine Corps and is comprised of approximately 20,500 Marines across 37 states.

The 4th Marine Division provides a commander the personnel and equipment to conduct infantry, artillery and mechanized operations Activated on Aug. 16, 1943, this unit was plunged into several famous World War II campaigns including, the Marshall Islands, Saipan, Tinian and Iwo Jima.

After peace was declared in 1945, 4th Marine Division was the first Marine division selected to return to the United States. It was deactivated at Camp Pendleton on Nov. 28, 1945. On Feb. 16, 1966, a headquarters nucleus of the Division was reactivated at Camp Pendleton and its colors were uncased June 23.

During operations Desert Shield and Storm numerous units were mobilized and deployed to the Gulf Region. These units provided combat personnel and combat support that contributed to the victory of the allied forces.

The 4th Marine Division's primary mission is to provide trained combat and combat support personnel and units to augment and reinforce the active component in time of war or national emergency; and to have the capability to reconstitute the division, if required.

Three infantry regiments make up the Division's fighting backbone: the 23rd, 24th, and 25th. This team is reinforced by the 14th Marine Artillery Regiment, 4th Combat Engineer Battalion and 4th Reconnaissance Battalion. The division is further strengthened by two tank battalions, the 4th and 8th and also by 4th Assault Amphibian Battalion and 4th Light Armored Reconnaissance Battalion.

To remain ready for mobilization, 4th Marine Division participates in approximately 60 annual training exercises.

Some of these exercises included training in desert, jungle, mountain, urban and cold weather environments. They also maintain the ability to conduct amphibious assaults and security support.

4th Marine Aircraft Wing

Brig. Gen. Harold J. Fruchtnicht,
Commanding General, 4th MAW

4th MAW's mission is to organize, train and equip individual Marines and combat ready groups, squadrons and air defense units to augment and reinforce active components when required.

Sgt. Maj. August F. Beilmann,
Sergeant Major, 4th MAW

A key element of the Marine Air-Ground Task Force is the Aviation Combat Element (ACE).

The ACE is a Marine Aircraft Wing, which contains multiple aircraft groups, squadrons, and all supporting assets needed to provide in-depth aviation support.

The 4th Marine Aircraft Wing is composed of four Marine Aircraft Groups, 41, 42, 46 and 49. The aircraft groups are supported by Marine Wing Support Group 47 and Marine Air Control Group 48.

At its conception, Marine Reserve Aviation consisted of few men with obsolete aircraft. World War II activated 1,278 reservists who fought in the Pacific skies and supported ground operations.

Currently there are approximately 9,500 Marines assigned to 4th Marine Aircraft Wing.

The Wing's rotary aviation assets include the CH-53E Super Stallion, CH-46 Sea Knights, AH-1W Super Cobra attack helicopter and the UH-1N Huey. The fixed wing aircraft are the F/A-18 Hornet and KC-130 Hercules.

The 4th Marine Aircraft Wing's mission is to organize, train and equip individual Marines and combat ready groups, squadrons and air defense units to augment and reinforce the active component when required. They continue to strive toward seamless integration with active units in order to serve as part of the Total Force.

To make the integration with the active-duty seamless, the Wing takes part in approximately 20 exercises annually. These exercises help ensure they will be ready to answer their country's call when needed.

The strength of the 4th Marine Aircraft Wing lies in the highly trained and motivated Marines who work behind the scenes performing all the necessary duties that keep the aircraft safely operating. From the mechanics, ordnance specialists, air traffic controllers and fire and rescue personnel, safety is everyone's responsibility and one they all take seriously. It is this mindset that allows the 4th Marine Aircraft Wing to maintain its high operational tempo and outstanding safety record.

4th Force Service Support Group

Brig. Gen. John W. Bergman,
Commanding General, 4th FSSG

4th FSSG provides general and direct support and sustained combat service support above the organic capabilities of support elements of Marine Air Ground Task Forces.

Sgt. Maj. Thomas H. Howard
Sergeant Major, 4th FSSG

The Marines and sailors of 4th Force Service Support Group provide a full range of critical logistical support needed to keep the Marine Forces Reserve units fully combat operational.

Midland, Texas was the first home of 4th Service Regiment in 1966. By 1968, the unit's headquarters had moved to Orlando, Fla., and then to Atlanta, Ga., in 1971.

In May 1976, the unit was re-designated as the 4th Force Service Support Group, Fleet Marine Force. The headquarters remained in Atlanta for 10 years and then was moved to Marietta, Ga., in 1987. The 4th FSSG flag has continued to fly in its present location, New Orleans, La., since February 1992.

The mission of 4th Force Service Support Group is to provide general and direct support and sustained combat service support above the organic capabilities of support elements of Marine Air-Ground Task Forces.

They provide combat service support in six main functional areas: maintenance, supply, transportation, medical and dental care and engineer support.

The Group consists of Headquarters and Service Battalion, 4th Maintenance Battalion, 4th Supply Battalion, 6th Engineer Support Battalion, 4th Landing Support Battalion, 6th Motor Transport Battalion, 6th Communications Battalion, 4th Medical Battalion and 4th Dental Battalion.

Fourth Force Service Support Group is an integral member of a Marine Air-Ground Task Force, providing focused logistical support both in garrison and to deployed units throughout the world.

This diversified command has nearly 10,000 Marines and sailors with over 150 different occupational specialties.

The Marines and sailors hone their skills annually by participating in approximately 50 exercises throughout the United States and around the globe.

Total Force and Deployments

Marine Forces Reserve units remain ready to augment and reinforce our active duty forces in any clime or place.

Marine Forces Reserve provides our nation with a force in readiness composed of individuals of exceptional dedication, ability and professionalism.

Force units train to the same rigorous standards as active duty Marines in order to achieve seamless integration with their active duty counterparts.

Upon enlisting in the Reserves, Marines typically obligate themselves for a six-year period. After successfully completing basic training and their military occupational skill training they then train one weekend a month and two weeks a year.

Though training missions vary from unit to unit, the philosophy that 'Every Marine is a Rifleman First' permeates throughout the Force.

Marine Reserves are only mobilized upon order from the President of the United States, which makes them different from the National Guard who is activated by their states' governor.

Reserve members are called to duty either as individuals or as a unit. Whether a mission requires one intelligence officer or an infantry battalion of several hundred, the Reserves are poised to rapidly mobilize to accomplish the mission.

During the Persian Gulf War more than 31,000 members of the Marine Reserves were mobilized in order to reinforce and augment the active duty Marine Forces.

During peacetime members of Marine Forces Reserve are routinely called up to provide their active duty counterparts with operational tempo relief — notably, Operation Joint Guardian in Kosovo and fulfilling security commitments in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Today's modern Marine Forces Reserve is capable of combined operations with foreign militaries or in joint missions alongside any service branch of the U.S. military.

Marine Forces Reserve offers the nation a tremendous asset; trained and capable men and women who are ready, willing and able to accomplish any mission they are tasked.

Community Involvement

MarForRes is allied with local communities nationwide, telling the Marine Corps story and imparting our Core Values of Honor, Courage and Commitment.

The Marine Corps depends on the willing, enthusiastic and informed support of the American people to accomplish its mission. Therefore, establishing and maintaining good relations with our local communities is an important responsibility for all Marine Forces Reserve units.

Because our Command is located in cities and towns across this nation, the men and women of Marine Forces Reserve are uniquely positioned to "Tell the Marine Corps Story" to those of our fellow citizens who typically have little or no contact with the Marine Corps.

The ultimate goal of all Community Relations Programs is to increase the public's understanding of the Marine Corps, the high quality of our personnel, and the vital role we play in the security of the United States.

Marine Forces Reserve Community Relations Programs take many forms and can vary to fit the characteristics of different communities. Reserve Unit Commanding Officers must get to know the community around their unit in order to design a community relations program that will be effective in their area.

Our annual Toys for Tots Campaign, MFR Band New Orleans, Young Marines, Speaker's Bureau's, Color Guards and equipment static displays are all examples of Community Relations programs. In addition, Marines are encouraged to support and participate in civic, volunteer and charitable organizations to improve the local quality of life.

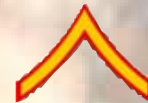

Marine Forces Reserve Community Relations Programs help our command stay ready, willing and able and ensure the Marine Corps continues to be held in the highest esteem by the public we defend.
